

For immediate release
November 23, 2010

Press contact: Erin Foley
Marketing/PR Coordinator
(708) 496-4752

Peace Students Visit Northwestern's Medill School of Journalism

Queen of Peace High School journalism students attended the Ninth Annual High School Journalism Day on Friday, Nov. 5 at Northwestern University's Medill School. Each student attended seminars geared to young journalists in print, broadcasting and online media, including Feature Writing, Photojournalism, Interview Techniques, Blogs and Online Journalism and Backpack Journalism.

Peace's journalism students produce the award-winning "Amity" and shared copies of their latest issue with other schools in attendance and also met professors from the Medill School.

Following the seminars, keynote speaker NBC-5 Chicago's Alex Perez, a graduate of Peace's neighboring St. Laurence High School (Burbank), spoke to the students.

The following students attended the High School Journalism Day: seniors Astrid Delgado, Tecora Duerson, Shelby Kodis, Stacey Kohnhorst, Raven Procter, Nicole Sedlacek and Emily Shoulder; juniors Samantha Lesniewski and Lauren Maton; and sophomore Ashley Reed.

#####

Cutline:

Queen of Peace High School journalism students posed for a picture with NBC-5 Chicago's Alex Perez following his keynote address during the 9th Annual High School Journalism Day on Nov. 5 at Northwestern University's Medill School.